TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

For five weeks in the summer of 2002, Mister Michael Neiß participated in the Hólar Investigation, one of the most comprehensive archeological projects ever undertaken in Iceland.

Mister Neiß was a talented and versatile employee. He made sketches of antiquities found during the summer's excavations, and performed many other tasks in the study, which is directed by the undersigned.

It is a pleasure to confirm that Mister Neiß performed these tasks carefully and conscientiously. His drawings, for instance, give a clear image of archeological items found at the ancient centre of learning and bishopric at Hólar in Hjaltadal Valley of northern Iceland, and they will be very useful in preparation of reports and booklets on results of the investigation.

Sincerely
